Free Drop-in Sessions: All About Heart Failure

Heart failure affects people in many different ways and can develop over several years or suddenly as a result of a heart attack. For most people heart failure is a life-long condition.

Join experts from St. Paul's Hospital's Heart Function Clinic in a half-day of free drop-in sessions designed to provide those suffering from heart failure and their families with information on different aspects of heart failure. Take the opportunity to talk one-on-one with a heart-failure specialist while enjoying some "heart-healthy snacks." Learn how to manage reduced heart function and stay healthy.

Presented by Providence Health Care and the Canadian Chronic Heart Failure Clinics Network, this event was made possible through an educational grant from Medtronic.
